	The document is very large and comprehensive, but it is very challenging to understand any updates as there is no summary of the changes since the last document. This means that pharmacists will potentially need to thoroughly search through the document and continually cross-reference to the original version to discover the changes. Whilst not only being a huge amount of unnecessary workload, it would also be unrealistic to expect pharmacists be able to specifically identify the changes and not miss some potential changes. An additional summary document of the amendments and/or a process of highlighting of the specific changes in the full document would be extremely useful.

	The original All Wales Common Ailments Formulary included Intertrigo as a condition for treatment. It is noted that Intertrigo is not listed in the update document. A summary of changes to the document to allow comparison would be useful, together with rationale for the condition not being included. It is assumed low consultation numbers to date for the condition, but rationale would be useful to ensure patients are still able to access treatments for conditions for which they present.
