| General Comments    |  |                   | The Royal Pharmaceutical Society is the professional body for pharmacists and pharmacy in Great Britain. As professionals in pharmaceutical care, pharmacists are well equipped to offer advice on managing clinical conditions and to raise patients' and carers' awareness and increase their understanding of their condition and therapy. With an increasing number of pharmacist independent prescribers and those specialising in specific disease states such as Parkinson's disease, pharmacists are often directly involved with managing patient therapy and regular reviews. |
| Quality Statement 2 | Information about impulse control disorders | Page 8     | Pharmacists are suitably trained to and routinely provide advice and information on detecting and managing side effects of medicines to both patients and their carers'. Being experts in medicines, pharmacists should be included in the examples of healthcare professionals given on page 8 who provide information about the risk of impulse control disorders.  |
| Quality Statement 3 | Supportive therapies                        | Page 12    | With increasing number of pharmacists and pharmacist independent prescribers working in GP practices, pharmacists may be involved in seeing patients with Parkinson's disease and are able to refer appropriately to supportive therapies as needed. Pharmacists should be included in the list of healthcare professionals that is given on page 12.   |
| Quality Statement 4 | Medicines in hospital or a care home        | Page 14-16 | Pharmacists working in hospitals and care homes are often the first healthcare professionals to record a patient's medication history and do so on a regular basis. Pharmacists will also clinically screen medicines charts to ensure appropriate information in relation to medicines, such as dosing and timing is also recorded. Pharmacists should be included in the list of health and social care practitioners that is provided on page 16.  |
